DEATH COMES TO FREDERICK WALTER AT AGE OF SEVENTY.

One Of Cloverport's Best Known and Wealthiest
Citizens Survives Two Strokes of Paralysis and Succumbs to Third.

WAS A MAN NOTED FOR HIS GENEROSITY.

Frederick Walter, one of Cloverport's wealthiest and best known citizens, died last Thursday afternoon about 1 o'clock as the result of a paralytic stroke, the third in his life. The first stroke was received April 2, 1875, and the second on November 24, 1886. Last Wednesday night, about 9:30 o'clock, he was taken with colic, which was followed at 12:30 by the third and final stroke of paralysis. Death did not come to relieve his suffering until over twelve hours later.

Mr. Walter was born, in 1834, at Sobernheim, Prussia. He was a son of John and Eliza Walter, who immigrated to America and settled at Rome, Ind., about 1842. His father was a butcher at Derby for about six years and then came to this city to reside. In the meantime the son got a position with a Col. Kinser, who operated a store boat between Louisville and New Orleans.

After being in the employ of Col. Kinser for nearly seventeen years, Mr. Walter came to Cloverport and purchased the interest of Philo Duncan in the general merchandise firm of Vest & Duncan, after which the firm was styled Vest & Walter. In 1878 he sold out his interest to Wm. G. Smart and retired from an active business life, on account of receiving his first stroke of paralysis. However, he was still able to go about a great deal and to look after his business interests. Between the first and second strokes, he traveled extensively, making trips to Europe, Cuba, California and elsewhere, accompanied by friends. The second stroke came on November 24, 1886, and ever afterwards he was practically speechless and unable to care for himself. His every want was carefully looked after until the time of his death by Mr. and Mrs. Chas. May, at whose home he lived. During his active business life he amassed a large estate, mostly in bonds, which has been looked after by Mr. A. B. Skillman, cashier of the Breckenridge Bank, which was closed Saturday out of respect to Mr. Walter, who was connected with it many years as director and vice president.

Only one public office was held by Mr. Walter. As a member of the city council in 1871 and as chairman of the street committee he agitated the movement which resulted in a three-foot grade on Main street, which was found afterwards to be an improvement.

Frederick Walter was a man noted for his kindness and generosity to his fellow men. In a sense, he was helpful in a double way, because he would not help a man who was in trouble until he had encouraged him to help himself. One of his remarkable traits was his power as a reader of human nature. At the first impression of a stranger he could nearly always tell what manner of a man he was. He was a member of the M. E. church of this city, with which he united about 1878. He was never married.

Mr. Walter's estate was worth between $50,000 and $60,000. All of his relatives are provided for in his will and $1,000 is left to the Methodist church. All his bequests are left in trust, A. B. Skillman and Wm. G. Smart being the trustees appointed. At present it is not known when his will will be probated.

Mr. Walter is survived by one sister, Mrs. Chas. May, Sr., of this city, and the following nieces and nephews: Misses Eva and Eliza May and David May, of this city; Walter May, Detroit, Mich.; Chas. May, Jr., Shreveport, La.; Mrs. J. Scott Vance, Scott, Okla.; Mrs. E. H. Briedenbach, Owensboro; and John Sauer, Lyonsia.

The funeral was conducted from the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. May Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Rev. P. L. King, of the Methodist church, officiating. The interment was at the Oglesby graveyard, southwest of the city. The pallbearers were: C. K. Mook, of Louisville, Geo. May, of Cannelton; and Walter Smart, L. T. Reid, J. W. Pate, Henry Solbrig, Fred May, Jr., and C. B. Skillman. The funeral was one of the largest held in Cloverport in years.

Exposure to a sudden climatic change produces cold in the head and catarrh is apt to follow. Provided with Ely's Cream Balm you are armed against Nasal Catarrh. Price 50 cents at druggists, or Ely Brothers, 58 Warren street, New York, will mail it. The Balm cures without pain, does not irritate or cause sneezing. It spreads itself over an irritated and angry face, relieving immediately the painful inflammation, cleanses and cures. Cream Balm quickly cures the cold.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Miller, of Hopkinsville, were in the city Monday, en route home from a visit at Hardinsburg.

S. S. WORKERS WERE MANY AT HENDERSON.

The Thirty-ninth Annual Convention of the State Sunday-school association held several enthusiastic and profitable sessions at Henderson last week, with hundreds of delegates present. LAKE GREEN'S LAND.
G. W. Kirkridge, of Falls of Rough, Ky., who was in the city yesterday purchasing goods, commenting on Lake Green's landed possessions, remarked that Green owns between eight and ten thousand acres in that section. While as farms on a large scale and some much land as pasture, the greater portion is still covered with unbroken forests.—Saturday's Courier-Journal.

LEWISPORT HAS A BIG STREET FAIR.

Fine Displays of Town's Business Houses and Industries On Floats in Parade.

NEARLY 3,000 PEOPLE ATTEND.

There are very few towns in Kentucky of the size of Lewisport where more enterprise, push and co-operation is displayed among its business men and citizens generally. This fact was signally demonstrated last Saturday, when they held their one-day street fair and reunion. This was one of the finest displays of a town's business, its resources, manufactures and general prosperity we ever witnessed. And, for a one day's show, it can't be beat. The first thing on the programme was a street parade. This was made up of "Rough Riders," Lewisport's military company of drilled boys and girls, large floats representing all the business houses of the town and its manufacturers, headed by a brass band, the members of which were the young, active business men of the town. Then came the floats of the drygoods houses, the grocery stores, drug stores, blacksmith shop, in tall operation, planing mill, chair factory, making chairs, honing mill with a handsome display of all its brands of flour artistically arranged. This was considered the best display in the procession, if one could make a distinction, for, to our minds, they were all "best". There was a stock and grain dealer's wagon, which was a miniature stock car, a double decker loaded with sheep, hogs, cattle, grain and hay and farm implements. It was the handiwork of the J. B. Taylor Company, the live stock and grain dealers. The Lewisport Bank, the only institution of the kind in the town, was alive too. It let its light shine with a big fire and burlap roof safe, so constructed that you couldn't tell it from the real thing.

Between 2,000 and 3,000 people witnessed the parade. Every avenue in the town was crowded with a mass of human beings, men, women, about five women to one man, and children, all happy, cheerful and enjoying the festivities. Booths were erected on every corner of the main thoroughfare, where refreshments and something good to eat could be had at reasonable prices. The young folks, what a time they had! Shooting balls, throwing confetti and casting silly guesses. It was a continuous exhibition. The band played while "Mr. Houlihan" and his happy family paraded the streets and made fun for the boys. A live fox was turned loose on the streets with twenty-five or thirty hounds pursuing him. Bicycle races, sack races and numerous other sources of entertaining features kept you busy watching to keep out of the way of the fun makers.

We congratulate the managers and the citizens and especially the business men of Lewisport on their splendid success. Other towns ought to take the pattern and do likewise. It's good for any community to have something of this kind once a year. It wasn't gotten up to make money,—just for the people to have a good time, meet and shake hands and have a reunion.

To The Memory of Walter E. Riedel and Wallace Lishen.

With overalls on and faces bright,
These boys left their homes,
Little thinking, 'ere another night,
They would lie dead alone.
The roar of steam, the crash of timbers,
The boiler's leaden boom,
The gallant engine's panting breath,
Were echoes of their doom.
Fond mothers, little did you mind
The farewell words so lightly said
Would be the last on earth to them,
The lowly grave their bed.
But God knows best, it was his will
To call your brave boys home;
They are waiting now at pearly gates
Bidding their loved ones come.
Though the train lost part of its brave, young crew
And sorrow to your hearts is given,
Yet try to know your loss is their gain,
They have made their home run to heaven.

CONLEY GOES FREE

W. W. Conley came into town from Tar Springs Friday and gave himself up to Deputy Sheriff B. H. Wilson, who took him to Hardinsburg and placed him in jail to await trial on charges preferred by Mrs. Lily Fager, proprietor of the Springs. Conley was tried in county court yesterday and cleared of all the charges, which included the use of insulting and abusive language to Mrs. Fager and threats to destroy her property. Conley was defended by Murray & Murray, of Hardinsburg, Commonwealth's attorney, Gus Brown, was the counsel for the plaintiff.

P. O. Priest, of Glendene, was found guilty and fined $50 and costs for selling ether in a local option district, in county court, at Hardinsburg. Monday, it being his second trial. The first trial, on August 23, resulted in a hung jury.

Struck by Steamship.

Thrilling Story of the Rescue of a Crew of Brave Sailors Who Were Calmly Facing Death On a Run Down Fishing Smack.

For two minutes seventeen Gloucester fishermen looked death between the eyes. His breath was upon their cheeks. His key hands clutched them. It savors of the miraculous that they all slipped out of his grasp.

And the story of the sinking of the Harry G. French, a Gloucester fishing smack, by the ocean greyhound Deutschland lay down in the story of the quaint Cape Ann city as the most marvellous of all its tales of soul stirring escapes.

When eight hanks tinkled on the bell of the schooner Harry G. French at midnight, she was lastly sliding on the starboard tack over a long, smooth swell eighteen miles northwest of the South Shoal lightship. In the bow, peering blankly into a blanket of white fog that shut out everything a hundred yards away and below the fog horizon stood Arthur Farrington of the watch.

Away off to the eastward, rushing toward New York with a cargo of human souls, the Deutschland, a Hamburg-American steamship and fastest passenger boat that crosses the Atlantic, cut through the swell at the speed of a railroad train. Bright lights shone in her saloon. The sound of music and applause and laughter drifted into the cold gray fog. It was the night of the regular concert. Above the sounds of merriment at intervals of a minute rose and fell the mournful voice of the siren. On the bridge and in the crew's nest officers and lookouts were straining their eyes ahead into the mist, although perforce they must strike any obstacle before them ere they could more than signal for a stop. On the deck of the Harry G. French the watch kept up their dreary vigil. Below the darkness slumbered on.

From far out astern came rolling through the fog the sound dreaded by the sailors more than howling wind or hissing sea or chilling iceberg. It belated a maddened bull and rose and fell in a walling crescendo. At its head a doleful sound, the screech of a siren above the waves. In an instant the watch shouted down the open hatchways forward and aft.

"All hands on deck! Steamer!"

The watch blew frantically on the fog horn. Every man shouted. Butcher the men facing death do not lose their heads. With the stern of their boat allied off as though by a knife, their after rigging a mass of wreckage and the Atlantic pouring into the gaping trough, they managed the dory and went to look for the seine boat. And fate was kind. Drawn along by the suction of the Deutschland, the boat followed the schooner and was within thirty feet of her when the sailors set into the fog with the dory. It was a matter of seconds to get to the side of the vessel and take all hands aboard.

Within two miles the Deutschland stopped. Had the captain attempted to turn his mammoth craft he could never have found the place where the collision took place, so he backed in a straight line and came to a stop where the seventeen shouting sailors awaited him in the little open boat. He had every lifeboat, and the boats were ready to let fall. The Harry G. French rolled for a moment, her decks awash, then reeled and staggered and quickly slipped beneath the waves.

At John Chisholm's office in Gloucester the crew sat about the rook and talk of their harrowing experience. Out through the windows they can see the open waters beyond the harbor and the channel where past Ten Pound island they sailed on the French's last voyage. In at the door creep the smells of oysters and codfish and cod. They are waiting to find whether anything can be done to recover for them any of the value of their lost clothing and other belongings and when Captain Chisholm will send another vessel for a catch.

That's the story of Gloucester and her men that brave the sea in boats of foam and under. They have to live, and that they and their families may live the sea takes its toll—100 men a year.

Rare Orthodontical Curious.

The catalogue of the Museum Tradescantianum, or Tradescant's museum, published in England in the year 1656, makes mention of many rare orthodontical curios owned or left on deposit in that institution. Among the curious listed there are especially interesting—viz. "two feathers from the tail of a phoenix." "Easter eggs laid by a maypole banyan tree" and "the child of a phoenix." "The child of a phoenix" is a rare curiosity.

Its Advantages.

Scene—Two stopping at small railroad station. Irritable Old Gentleman—What on earth do they stop at a station like this for? Objectionable Passenger (blushing)—To allow me to get out. Irritable Old Gentleman—Ah! I see it has its advantages then.

The Reason.

Little Son—Father, is there a reason for all this? Father—Yes, I suppose so. Little Son—Well, then, father, do you have any eggs? Father—Because they are so hard to come by.

Give Him a Chance.

The Elderly Lady—They say my wife has money. The Younger—Well, that isn't his fault. They've only been married a short time.

Between the Horns of a Dilemma.

He was walking to and fro on the station platform, and his anxiety was so marked that a friend inquired:

"What's the matter, Tibbs? You look as if you had something serious on your mind."

"I'm worried," he replied. "I'm worried; badly worried. I've just found a dollar in my trousers pocket."

"You're the first man I ever saw that worried over finding money he didn't know he had."

"But you don't understand. I can't make up my mind whether I forgot the dollar or whether my wife slipped it in my pocket on my way out. You see, she has been accusing me of keeping things from her. Now, if I were to blow this bill in without saying anything to her about it and it should turn out that she had played a trick on me my finish would be worth writing up. On the other hand, if I go to her and confess that I found it she'll simply take the dollar. I haven't been so worried in a month."—New York Press.

The Repulsive Squid.

Having caught a squid, a landlubber at sea then describes him. "The squid is a small cousin of the octopus. He is about one foot long from the tip of his tail to the tip of his tentacles extended. Normally he is of a pale tan and rich cream, with darker spots, but he has the power to become if frightened almost colorless in an instant. In extreme fright he discharges a dirty brown secretion in the manner of his kind and escapes while the enemy is enveloped in the impenetrable smudge. The head is principally arms, with a formidable parrot-like beak in the center, while his eyes are located just back of the arm cluster. The tail is of the shape of a spearhead, with rounded barbs. I did not examine him very closely because of his snakelike tentacles and, further, because his beak, rasping on the spear iron, was most unpleasant. We dropped him overboard, and I was glad to see him go."

Wild Dogs of Africa.

Of the wild dog of central Africa an explorer writes: "The wild dog is common enough. He is an ugly looking beast, with a pided body, coarse hair, short head and large, upright ears. These wild dogs play fearful havoc with game, occasionally clearing out whole districts precisely in the same manner as the red dogs of India, before which even the tiger is said to retreat. They have a wonderful power of scent, wonderful boldness, endurance and pertinacity, and their loose, easy gallop covers the ground far more quickly than it appears to do. They usually hunt in considerable packs, although I have sometimes met them in threes and fours. I have never heard of wild dogs actually attacking man, but they often behave as if on the point of doing so, and unarmed travelers have been literally treed by them before now."

A Monkey Detective.

A monkey brought a criminal to justice at Singapore some time ago. A native with a little boy, a bear and a monkey traveled lately through several villages in the Straits Settlements and made a good sum of money by his "animal" tricks. One day he was found with his throat cut, the boy and the bear lying murdered close by, while the monkey had escaped up a tree. The bodies, with the monkey and its farnishes were taken to the police station where the monkey suddenly rushed at a man in the crowd, seized his leg and would not let go. The man seemed so alarmed and anxious to get away that the police became suspicious and searched him, with the result of finding part of the money belonging to the murdered native. The balance was discovered at his house.

Feudal Normandy.

A traveler in France writes: "Normandy is sweet, clean, green and prosperous. Its iris crowned thatches are the most beautiful, its poesy gardens its most sedulously cultivated, and its farnishes the most enchanting in all France. Its cows are sleek and good milkers, its horses world famous and its blond women—even those seasons by field labor—always sprightly and often fair. It is attractive, sensuously speaking, at every season, and the Normans, with their dour frown for their pocketbooks, are not bad company in the long run."

Bishop Joseph S. Keys, Southern M. E. Church, writes: "We gave Dr. Moffet's 'TEETHINA' (Teething Powders) to our little grandchild with the best results. The teething was almost magical, and certainly more satisfactory than from anything we ever used." "TEETHINA" (Teething Powder) Conquers and Overcomes the Effects of the Summer Heat.

Old Tree Superstitions.

The old Teutonic and Saxon races in central and northern Europe, before the introduction and spread of Christianity, had a great veneration for trees. They would never willingly damage them. Under large trees, especially old oaks, the great councils were held and judgment given, and the graves of this people were found in groves, they always being buried under the roots of a tree. This all was a result of the superstition that their gods lived in those trees. In the Hindu tree Berchud dwelt, a benign spirit who took charge of the babies and rocked their cradles when the nurses fell asleep; in the oak, Donar, the thunder god; in the willows all sorts of spirits.

In the elder trees the dwarfs. When ever the festivals of these gods were celebrated their trees were decorated with lights, wreaths and garlands (tassels), and offerings were hung in the branches, which, however, were plundered again when the festival was over, the gods being supposed only to appropriate the best.

The Camel as a Soldier.

The camel is a good soldier, says a London writer. It may be stunted in stature, but it is as steady under fire as a tower. The Persians mounted small camels on the backs of their camels and called them "camel soldiers," or "little wasps." This fashion was adopted in India, and after the battle of Salween 2,000 of these artillery camels were captured. In the Indian mutiny the British had a camel corps of 350 beasts, and on the back of each camel sat a Scotch highlander in his kilt. In 1845 Sir Charles Napier and a camel corps in Sind, and in one day he marched seventy-five miles, defeated a brigand chief and marched home again. In 1878 the British used camels in order that they might claim the government bounty.

Monster Bed.

Though the beds of the royal personages of England were elaborately carved and hung with rich curtains even so late as the Tudor period, it is recorded that King Henry VIII's bed contained only straw beneath all its finery. A curious order exists as to preventions to be taken against the possibility of intended mischief to the royal person in the making of the bed, for the usurer was to search the straw through with a dagger, "that there be none untruth therein, and to tumble on the down bed for the better search thereof." The bed of Henry VIII, was nearly eleven feet square, and of even more generous dimensions is the great bed to which Shakespeare refers in a well known passage in "Twelfth Night," which was twelve feet square. This "great bed of Ware" has been a marvel for centuries.

He Sent Another.

A few years ago a well known lawyer resulted in settlement on an account to the publisher of a paper a two dollar bill, which was returned with the brief statement: "This note is counterfeit; please send another."

Two months passed before hearing from the lawyer again, when he apologized for the delay, saying: "I have been unable until now to find another counterfeit two dollar bill, but hope the one now inclosed will serve the purpose. I have been unable to discover what the objection was to the other, which I thought as good a counterfeit as I ever saw."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Summer Cold.

A summer cold is not only annoying but if not relieved pneumonia will be the probable result by Fall. One Minute Cough Cure clears the phlegm, draws out the inflammation, heals, soothes and strengthens the lungs and bronchial tubes. One Minute Cough Cure is an ideal remedy for children. It is pleasant to the taste and perfectly harmless. A certain cure for croup, cough and cold. Sold by all druggists.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition, beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Birmingham, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

Don't make any mistake but remember the name, Swamp-Root. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Birmingham, N. Y., on every bottle.

FORCE OF LIGHTNING

Some of the Feats Performed by the Mystic Fluid.

HAS EXPLOSIVE FORCE

The Way Great Masts of Ships Have Been Shattered-When Lightning Does Wonders.

ONE BOLT HAS MUCH POWER.

The explosive force of lightning acting on dense wood is not, as a rule, so great as when living trees are struck, though Sir William Harris shows that the masts of ships of the line, three feet in diameter and 110 feet long, bound with hoops of iron half an inch thick and five inches wide, the whole weighing about eighteen tons, have been in many instances torn asunder and the hoops of iron scattered about the decks. It will be found, as a rule, that trees are struck by lightning far more often than are buildings, even if the trees and buildings are close together. This is partly because the trees are higher.

But there must probably be some unknown reason not only for the frequency with which trees are struck, but for the recurrence of such shocks in the case of particular trees or trees in the same locality. The commonest form of injury is that the current passes down the bark of the tree, stripping off the bark, wider or narrower, from top to bottom. Sometimes on an oak two or three of these lightning marks are seen, evidently caused at different times.

There must be something in the form or situation of earth below the trees which endures it. An instance is quoted in Mr. Anderson's descriptive book of the Church of St. Mary in Genoa, which was frequently struck by lightning, sometimes as often as twice a year. It was noticed that the electric force always followed the same track. It was discovered later that the walls were clamped with iron, and that the lightning had followed the path in which the metal offered the greatest continuity, destroying the tree between.

If the ground below the tree or building is hard and dry, the contact with the earth, in which the lightning expands its force and disperses, is difficult, and the destruction of the object struck is likely to result. This may explain the frequency with which a "dashed" tree is seen, standing its dead arms on the summit of some rocky cliff or peak. The ground below it is dry and does not easily lead away the current into the earth.

At the same time thunderclouds undoubtedly tend to discharge, or perhaps it would be safer to say that the transmission from the cloud to the tree more frequently takes place, over pieces of water and along the courses of rivers than elsewhere.

In a park in one of the eastern counties of England there is a large lake. The park contains more trees struck by lightning than the whole of the rest of the estate. Some miles away is a lake called locally the "Lightning road" from the frequency with which accidents have occurred there either to trees, horses, cattle or passengers. In this park there recently occurred an instance of the explosive effect in certain circumstances not perfectly known.

A very tall spruce, probably 100 feet high, was "exploded" from top to bottom into pieces the size of the wood used in making chairs. Every strand of bark was stripped from them, and the wood looked as if it had been shredded up for firing. A similar instance occurred some years ago when an oak in the grove below the foot of the White Lodge in Richmond park exploded on the first day of September in each year. Heretofore the date was the fifteenth of September, but the last legislature made the change. All property will be assessed as of the first day of September.

In these cases it is probable that the current acts up such a tremendous heat that all the sap in the tree is converted into superheated steam, which explodes. The greater the heat the more of the cells in which moisture lies are expanded and the greater the destruction of the tissues of the tree. As there is most moisture between the bark and the trunk the first and greatest explosion takes place there, instantly driving the bark away into splinters. Frequently the explosion only takes place at that point.

As Sir Hiram Maxim pointed out after the great explosion of Mont Pelée, a very similar method is now used by the American manufacturers of wood pulp. The logs of fir are placed in a strong chamber, and there subjected to the action of superheated steam until the water in every cell is converted into explosive gas. The chamber is then opened, and the log explodes, converting itself into wood powder.—London Spectator.

AT THE FIRST SIGN Of Disfiguring Humors Use CUTICURA

Every child born into the world with an inherited tendency to torturing, disfiguring humors of the Skin and Scalp, becomes an object of the most tender solicitude, not only because of its suffering, but because of the dreadful fear that the disfigurement is to be lifelong and mar its future happiness and prosperity. Hence it becomes the duty of mothers of such afflicted children to acquire themselves with the best, the purest, and most effective treatment available, viz., the CUTICURA Treatment, consisting of warm baths with CUTICURA Soap, and gentle anointments with CUTICURA Ointment, the great Skin Cure. Cures in childhood are speedy, permanent, and economical.

A Sweet Breath

There is a never failing sign of a healthy stomach. When the breath is bad the stomach is out of order. There is no remedy in the world equal to the Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for curing indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach disorders. Mrs. Mary S. Chick, of White Plains, Ky., writes: "I have been a dyspeptic for years; tried all kinds of 'remedies' but continued to grow worse. By the use of Kodol I began to improve at once, and after taking a few bottles am fully restored in weight, health and strength, and can eat whatever I like." Kodol digests what you eat and makes the stomach sweet. Sold by all druggists.

RAICAL LIQUOR CURE.

There is only one custom in our country which I would like to see established in America, and that is the custom of dealing with drunkards, said a Persian. "In our country when a man gets drunk we take him and nail him to the sidewalk, driving the spikes through his ears. Then when other people come along they spit in his face and kick him until he is sober. I think this method would do a great deal of good in America, because you have more drunkenness than we do. There are no saloons in Persia, and the chief beverage being homemade wine. They don't even know what beer is. Our officials have several ways of making prisoners confess to crimes," said the Persian. "The favorite method is to take them on a stand around which all the people of the town gather and then put out one eye. If the crime is not very great an arm is cut off or a leg severed. If it is only a trivial offense probably an ear is amputated. Very often innocent people are subjected to these torments, but it cannot be helped."

"The Persian very seldom hangs a man for crime. If he kills another he is fined $15 and allowed to go. If he kills ten or a dozen and the people finally decide that he ought to be put to death he is hanged. But he is not hanged as they hang men in this country. He is hanged by the feet and a heavy weight is tied to his head. He is allowed to die. If the accused prisoner is a woman her hair is shorn from her head, provided the offense is a trivial one. If it is a serious one she may be turned into a room filled with mad cats and be scratched to death."

"Persian jails are dark cells and contain no furniture whatever. The government doesn't feed prisoners, this being left to friends of the accused. If he happens to have no friends he will starve to death. Oftentimes when food is brought by friends the keepers of the prison and the other officials appropriate it, so the prisoners have to go hungry."—Slovak City Journal.

TITLES.

The centurion, as the name implies, was the commander of 100 men in the Roman army.

The title balliff was formerly very honorable, and the official was vested with many important powers.

The title colonel comes from the word almost the same in several languages, signifying a column. The colonel was so called because he led or commanded the column.

The title mayor comes from the French and originally signified "one who keeps general." It was the head steward of a city, administering its affairs in the name of the king.

Imperator was originally a title of honor bestowed on a victorious general. After the downfall of the Roman republic it became the title of the supreme ruler and had the sense of our word emperor.

The royal drug bag has now almost disappeared and when used in the altered form of bag is applied to a military rank in the Turkish army. Originally it was deemed more honorable than that of colonel.

Nothing Left.—"I have had lots of friends who were guilty of mutilating books they had borrowed from me, but my latest experience was the most novel of all."

"What was it?" "I lent Mrs. Banks my dictionary a few days ago, and yesterday she returned it without a word!"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Canadian Whisk Crop.—Montreal, Aug. 24.—A Canadian Pacific official estimates the wheat yield for western Canada at 65,000,000 bushels.

A Close Finish.—Tom—And so you won the last race? Harry—Yes, but the finish was so close that I would have lost if the other horse had stuck out his tongue.—Kansas City Journal.

BACKACHE AND DIZZINESS.

Most of the Ailments Peculiar to the Female Sex Due to the Weakness of the Female Organs.

MRS. M. BRICKNER.

99 Eleventh Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

"A short time ago I found my condition very serious, I had headaches, pain in the back, and frequent dizzy spells which grew worse every month. I tried two remedies before Peruna, and was discouraged when I took the first dose, but my courage soon returned. In less than two months my health was restored."—Mrs. M. Brickner.

The reason of so many failures to cure cases similar to the above is the fact that the medicine is not the same as the one which cured Mrs. M. Brickner.

Female Trouble Not Recognized as Catarrh. In a female case are not commonly recognized as being caused by catarrh.

Catarrh of one organ is exactly the same as catarrh of any other organ. What will cure catarrh of the head will also cure catarrh of the pelvic organs. Peruna cures these cases simply because it cures the catarrh.

If you have catarrh write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Dr. J. C. Hartman, President of the American Medical Association, New York, N. Y.

A Discomfuted Widow. "Life has no more charms for me. I'll retire to a convent and spend the rest of my days in prayer and meditation," said a young widow.

"That would be the same as committing suicide. You are rich and beautiful and only thirty years of age!" "Twenty-nine, if you please!"

The Lucky Day. "What day of the week do you think is the luckiest to get married on?" queried the soft and sweet young thing.

"The eighth," replied the confirmed bachelor, refusing to be sentimental even for a minute.—
